THE EDITOR'S DREAM.

A reader who thought this was 'loo good'

to be thrown away, sends us the following.

Last evening I was talking

With an Editor, aged and gray,

I think, twee Christmas Day.

While specylpg in his pilice,

The Lord has sent me down

And he fold me of a dream he had

For he thought in angel entered

Clad in garmonts white and now.

Quoth the angel, I'm from heaven,

You've comforted and aided thousands. But from few received your pay. For you have labored bard

And the good Lord is preparing You're eternal, just reward. Then the Angel and the Editor. Started out for Heaven's gate. But when passing close to Hades, > MURDEN THE RECORD-MAKER.

At the Battle of Mukden, it would seem that about 750,000 Man - according to some Universe estilistes, 850,000 Went into the fight. The nearest upproach to these stupendous figures that occurs previouslyto the Russo-Japaness Rar is afforded by the cases of the Bettle of Leipsic in 1813, of Koniggrate in 1868, and Gravelotte in 187), in each of which hattice from 400,000 to 43% (100) men were engaged. At Solfering, 1174 in 1869, the total forces of botic sides aggregated treatly 800,000; at Wagtam, 1800, they amounted to 280,000; at Borndino, [1812, to 250,000; and at Jens, 18.6, to 200,000. According to revised and authoritative Japanese calculations, there may have been as many as 460,00 in the fighting line at Lisegang, and 580,000 in that at the Battle of the Sha ho. But from evan the 1)st quoted Egures to those given for the Mukden struggle there is a very long jump, and when from more paper statistics we pass to an attempt to realise mentally. the actual size of the forces engaged, the amozing magnitude of the operations scon bogins to impress least upon the dullest imagination. Again, the extraordinary duration of the Mukden battle, largely exceeding, as it did, that of even the long and weary fighting at Line yang, has a eer ous Bign ficance. At Borndino the conflict lasted for 125 hours, at Wagram for is hours, and at Leipsic for three days. But what is this comp red with the struggle at Mukden, which commended not later than Feb uary 24th, and the immediate objective of which was not reached until March 10th; while the pursuit to Tie-ling occupied another five or six days? - From Cussell & History of the Busso-

ROTENS OF A STREET

The Quiver for October opens with an article on Class Missions, in which the author says :- They talks about sending missionaries to Africa, but I think we wants 'em 'ere,' remarked a coalle to a visitor, who plunged into the black cloud which enveloped one hundred of the fraternity, on ressel lying in dock. A child's elementary ides of a missionary. A white man who goes out in a ship to black people, 'cis realised daily by two agents of the London City Mission, who in 1901 were first appointed to board the ships in Victoria and Albert Docks. But on arrival at the ship he analogy between the home and foreign missionary diverges, for the white man, lost to night whilst only a few yards from land, speedily becomes as black as his flock. These black, sheep soon realies that his sharing their condition is a proofof sincerity and interest in them. Coal itself has been described by a scientific writer of postic feeling as stored up sunbeams; and heneath the dusky surface of coalies warmth and kinduess of heart often wait to be kindled. They welcome their coming guest and they speed his departure by lowering him over the sides of a bost in a basket.

A missionary's confidence in their strong arms and good faith-is tried and proved when he hangs suspended over the water, Perhaps, however, the swing we mid-mir involves less risk than scaling the bulwarks by an ascent or descent of a slippery thirtyseven rung ladder. The question, Is it worth while? naturally demands en answer regarding rollgious work that entails wear and tear of mind and body. The results are the only satisfactory answer. It is impossible to tabulate the highest and best, those influences which must be at the root of all lasting good; but change of conduct gives indisputable evidence that labour amongst dock coalies is not in vain.

One, for instance, after breaking free from the curse of intemperance, set himself the voluntary task of helping others to do the same. His wife worked with him, and during three years he introduced forty-two members, twelve of whom were his own mates, to the Order of Good Templars, This was no mean few in face of the factthat drink is generally declared to be the curse, not only of dook coalies, but great black brotherhood whom London depends much for light and comfort. The supply of ardent refreshment is slways alluringly near to the throats purched and rough with black dust. The men do not belong to the class most likely to exercise self-restraint, for in their trade the survival of the ditest is a matter of physical and muscular suitability. Montal and moral recommandation must bow and retire before broad shoulders and stalwart frames.

His Lordship Sir Francis T. Th letter complained in the first instance that the writer had been unable to obtain a copy of the judgment that, of course, is a legitimate ground of complaint under the system in which law reports are published in this Colony and of which the profession and everyone is aware.
